With a mix of home-grown southern rock, country and Louisiana bayou flair, Eric Geibel (BMI, NSAI) has brought together a collection of heartfelt music straight from his soul. Geibel has been writing music for over twenty years and has recently been collaborating on songs with a group of songwriters including Larry Migliore (Cinderella & Long Broken Road), Eugene Crider (Never Forgotten), George Scholz (Whiskey, Women, Beer & BBQ) and his father Bruce Geibel (Navy Seabee, Trouble Knows I'm Here, Never Forgotten, Lighthouse & Trading Places).

Geibel has had four Number One Indie and Cashbox Magazine country hits including Always Changing, Breaking Hearts in Heaven, Trouble Knows I'm Here and Never Forgotten. He also has four cuts on Nashville recording artist Neil Russell's debut album, including the title cut Breaking Hearts in Heaven, along with Redneck, Two Souls Joining and Ghost Town.

He performed live during the CMA Music Festival at Fuel in June 2009 and is continuing to expand his catalog of music as an extremely prolific writer.

Geibel released his first album, "Just the Other Day" in December 2007 which began to capture the attention of producers and publishers from New York to Nashville to Los Angeles. Since then he has released a series of singles and is preparing to launch his second CD album in 2010.

Geibel's entire catalog is also available to other artists, A&R Reps, publishers and film producer's who are looking for the right music for upcoming projects.

Geibel grew up in a Navy military family and spent his youth traveling the world to over 35 countries and has visited 47 states. This unique perspective of people across the USA and around the world has had a profound influence on his music as he realized that music is a unifying force and the common language of the world.

"People all over the world share a simple love for music and it truly brings people together," Geibel said.
