

Evan Sharpley

Sharpley was a '09 draft pick by the Seattle Mariners. In his first season with the Mariners in the Arizona League, he compiled a .333 batting average with 7 HR's and 29 RBI's in only 37 games.

Sharpley was a two sport athlete at the University of Notre Dame. In 2006, he served as the back-up for All-American Brady Quinn. In '07, he split QB duties with Jimmy Clausen, finishing the season with a 55% completion percentage with 736 yards passing and 5 TD's. In '08 and '09, he again served as Clausen's back-up.

Although he played baseball at Notre Dame for 3 seasons, it wasn't until '09 when he focused on it. He saw significant playing time and hit .324 with 13 HR's and 40 RBI's in 51 games.
